PREFACE.

We present to the public of Norfolk our third edition of the CITY DIRECTORY.

Since our last edition the city has been correctly renumbered, and the several streets which were named alike, have been renamed, leaving only one street with the same name; as it was before, considerable confusion was created.

The NORFOLK CITY DIRECTORY is a home enterprise, gotten up by home folks, and should consequently meet with that substantial encouragement such works receive in other communities.

With many thanks for the liberal generosity of those friends who have patronized us this year, we submit the work, hoping only that those who are too critical will realize the force of the old saying, "Oh! that mine enemy would write a book."

NORFOLK, ITS LOCATION, &C.

The geographical position and natural advantages of Norfolk have been so often dilated upon that the subject has become almost exhausted ; but none the less interesting.

Its harbor is one of the finest in the world, at the confluence of the Southern and Eastern branches of the Elizabeth river, eight miles from Hampton Roads, and thirty-two miles from the ocean.

Norfolk's establishment, by observations of the Coast Survey, is located in Lat. N.,  $36^{\circ} 50', 50''$  ; and in Long. W.,  $76^{\circ} 18', 47''$ .

It is the chief commercial port in Virginia, and is remarkable for its accessibility for the largest vessels at all seasons of the year.

It is also the principal Naval station in the United States, having the finest Navy Yard, Dry Dock and Naval Hospital in the nation.

By the Census of 1870, the population was reported to be 19,384. Since that time, nearly two years past, the population has not increased to any extent. We have every facility for shipbuilding in all its branches, and our artizans are among the best in the country.

Progress is asserting its functions, and ere the issue of the next Directory, Norfolk will no doubt increase largely in inhabitants in consequence of the introduction of water, which will facilitate manufactories and invite capital—a consummation most devoutly wished for.

The population in 1840 was 10,920 ; in 1850, 14,320 ; which shows an increase since that time of about  $33\frac{1}{3}$  per cent. and might have been more except for a combination of circumstances. The commerce of this port has increased over two hundred per cent. since 1840, and is daily increasing. All that is wanted <sup>120</sup> to make Norfolk the Queen city of the South is direct trade, which will be supplied by the various railroad lines that must eventually centre at this point as the <sup>dict.</sup> mate port for the products of the South and West.
